

Janneke Pieters

Janneke Pieters is Assistant Professor in the Development Economics Group at Wageningen University and Research Fellow at IZA. Her research interests are in labor economics and development economics, with a focus on women's labor supply in developing countries, the labor market impacts of international trade, and measurement issues in agricultural employment.